PHOTOPLAYS AND PHOTOPLAYERS

Props Are Important Element In Making Of the Film Dramas.

One of the features of the production of a photoplay which requires the most constant attention, and is probably more difficult than anything else, is the securing of the right properties for the plays. The ner details of a production are the things that the producers are most careful to perfect. At least, that is the supposition. We have frequently taken occasion to criticise the lack of attention to this detail, which makes a film ridiculous.

The putting on of a play of the early period of the history of this country, for instance, with people carrying arms that were not invented until the latter part of the last century. This has been a frequent occurrence. The garbing of the characters in clothing of an entirely different period from that in which the action of the play is supposed to take place, is also a matter of frequent occurrence. One film recently produced, of an ancient period before the invention of watches, was rendered ridiculous by one of the characters pulling out a watch to determine the time.

The comment which has been made from time to time on this feature of the film in this column has called forth a statement of just what the film property men are called upon to do from H. M. Horkheimer, president of the Balboa Company. Mr. morkheim r considers this the most important element in the manufac-"You see," he explained, "we know we cannot take photographs with-out good cameras, skilled operators and perfect negative. We know are must have competent directors and experienced actors. We know we must have scenery and a stage. We can decide exactly how many or how much of these we need, but we never have enough props. We have two buildings packed to their roofs with props; and we think we shall never have to buy any more, the collection is so complete but the collection is so complete, but the very next photoplay that comes out of the scenario department may call for a dozen little things we forgotten. And it is the little things that furnish the finishing and often the most artistic touches to a photoplay.

"We buy everything outright and our investment runs into a lot of our investment runs into a lot of money. We have furniture of every period. Some new and some showing signs of long usage. Both are indispensible as are also the many contrivances for home adorament that have gone out of vogue, such as what-nots, the old-fashioned combination, hat, coat and umbrella rack, floral wreathes on box frames, mottos, shells and the various knick-knacks that were near to the hearts of our mothers and grandmothers. We have cottage organs, melodeons, pianofortes, accordions, consertinas. pianofortes, accordions, consertinas, githers and many musical instruments that will remind you of the dear, dum past. We have those quaint chairs, soins, stands, dressers and beds of from fifty to one hundred years ago. The old stuff is as necessary as the new.

"With the furniture we have we could equip a great Broadway hotel. while our objects of art are numerous that they require a num-ber of stockkeepers to keep track of them. The assortment comprises genuine bronze and marble statuary, replicas of famous sculptors, and thousands of pieces of china, crock-ery, earthenware, cut glass, handthousands of pieces of china, crockery, earthenware, cut glass, handhammered brass, hand-wrought iron, and hand-made copper vessels, vases, jars, drinking jugs, and practically everything that man has devised for use and embellishment since the world began.

"There are thirty different work baskets filled with needles, scissors, thimbles, and sewing materials. There are lamps in 200 designs, from the kerosene burner up to and in-the kerosene burner up to and in-cluding gas and electricity. Count the clocks. Enough of them to start a jewelry store. Notice the flower nots and jardinleres—a carload of them. There is hardly a thing you can think of that isn't here, and yet we are buying more every of a doubt if we will ever henough props."

CHAMBER MAY FIGH CAR LINE EXTENSION

CAR LINE EXTENSION

The Chamber of Commerce will act tonight on a resolution calling on the Public Utilities Commission to defer carrying out its order for an extension of the lines of the Washington Railway and Electric Company on Fourteenth street, between F street and Pennsylvania avenue, until it shall have given consideration to the entire traffic situation obtaining in the area bounded by New York and Pennsylvania avenues and Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets.
This resolution was adopted by the committee of the Chamber on municipal legislation last evening, and was the result of a protest from the Virginia Hotel company, owner of the New Willard After mich discussion the members of the committee determined to avoid reference to lindividual interests, and base their request to the Utilities
Commission upon a general ground.
Wilton J. Lambert, attorney for the hotel company, outlined that corporation's position, declaring that the owners of the property were not given notice of the hearing in the proposed extension, and had been refused further consideration at the hands of the cunmission. The establishment of the car

SINGLE TAX PLAN FOR TAKOMA PARK

Change in Proportion of Assessment, Suggested at Meeting, Causes Warm Debate.

Discussion of the single-tax system for Takoma Park marked the regular meeting of the mayor and council of that town last night when Councilman F. L. Lewton proposed a resolution looking to the instruction of the board of assessors to change the proportion of assessment in the town from the present basis o one-third full value on improved and two-thirds on unimproved to one-fourth and three-fourths, respectively. Aithough the instructions would not involve a radical change. Mr. Lewton supported his motion with purely single-tax arguments, incidentally rallying to his support many advocates of that idea, and also calling forth unfavorable criticism from those members of the council who from those members of the council who were opposed to the plan.

Councilman L. R. Grabill objected to the consideration of the motion on the ground that the council was not sufficiently informed on the idea to act intelligently, and that its passage would have a tendency to disturb real estate have a tendency to disturb real estate was explained that the assessors were engaged in appraising the present market value of every piece of property in the town with unusual thoroughness, and that when the board reports to the council that body can then apply any proportion it sees fit. Some of the aschanged in the town have not been changed in twenty years, causing inequalities which the council plans to do away with. The assessors are E. Norman Jackson, J. H. Ven Houten, and J. W. Shadle. They will report to the council in May.
